

RENAL UNIVERSITY: Patients With Venous Alerts

venous alerts occurring between 2006-01-09 and 2006-01-16 / 28 patients in this report: 14 with alerts since the last report (2006-01-09)

This report shows the number of venous alerts, defined as three high VAPR values on consecutive treatments, for all patients receiving at least one venous alert during the time range shown at the top of the report. A high VAPR value is one that is greater than 0.55. An alert should be considered an indication that the patient should be examined more closely by medical staff trained in detecting stenosis. The report also shows the date of the two most recent venous alerts, and the number of venous alerts for each patient for the thirty (2006-12-17), sixty (2005-11-17) and ninety days (2005-10-18) prior to this report date (2006-01-16). New activity since the last venous alert report is shown to the left of the patients' names.
